Come back to the NHS. We'll take good care of you.

If you're a trained nurse who's left the NHS, we'd like to have you back. There are now free 'return to practice' courses available with financial support during training. There's also the opportunity for flexible working, so that you can fit your work around your life, rather than the other way around. Plus the pay is getting better. Returning full time nurses can earn between £16,005 p.a. and £20,655 p.a. (more in London) and a pay increase is due from April 2003. For more information call 0845 60 60 655 or visit www.nhs.uk/careers

Career: Nursing Prognosis: Healthy

Nursing can bring you many opportunities, from specialising in Mental Health or A&E to helping people with Learning Difficulties. Whatever specialised area you choose, be it working within a hospital or in the community you'll find there's more investment in training and the pay is getting better. Newly qualified, full-time nurses will earn a minimum of £16,005 p.a. (from £19,873 p.a. in Inner London) and a pay increase is due from April 2003.
